New Finance Director Steve Davis, CPA, Joins the Port of Olympia

The Port of Olympia welcomed new Finance Director Steve Davis in August. Davis has worked with the Port of Olympia for over 20 years providing accounting and consulting services.

Davis has an extensive public accounting background. He owns his own public accounting firm, Davis Accounting Tax & Auditing Services, and has worked at the management level in three other CPA firms. In addition to his public accounting experience, he has served as the finance director and internal auditor of the Thurston Conservation District since 1998 and has taught accounting and auditing at the college level.

"We are very pleased to welcome Steve to the Port's management team," said Port Commission President Bob Van Schoorl. "He brings many years of accounting and finance experience in a variety of organizations to the Port."

Davis will oversee the Port's finance and accounting systems including accounts payable/receivable, payroll, managing the Port's cash position, internal and funding budget reporting and all other aspects of financial management. He will supervise the accounting department and reports to the Executive Director. He succeeds George Fox who is leaving the Port to pursue other opportunities.

"I am very excited about this opportunity," said Davis. "I have enjoyed my previous professional relationship with the Port and look forward to continuing to contribute to the Port's success as a member of its management team."
